

In this issue of the Annals of Family Medicine

Health Coaching Intervention 200

Benefits of a health coaching intervention delivered by trained medical assistants are sustained a year after coaching ends.

Prostate Cancer Patients' Survival Expectations 208

Men with localized prostate cancer have unrealistic views of life expectancy with and without treatment.

Symptomatic Colon Cancer Recurrence 215

A high proportion of colon cancer recurrences are found during non-scheduled visits and most are symptomatic.

Can Patients Help Physicians be Patient-Centered? 221

A pre-visit questionnaire asking about quality of life reduces encounter empathy.

Ruling Out Pulmonary Embolism 227

Clinician "gestalt" is equally sensitive to the Wells rule in predicting pulmonary emboli, but less specific.

Rates of Tobacco Treatment Delivery 235

The Ottawa Model for Smoking Cessation is associated with increased rates of smoking cessation treatment.

Work-Life Balance for Rural Women Family Physicians 244

Flexible employers, supportive communities, and negotiable patient boundaries help rural women physicians find work-life balance.

Patient-Reported Safety Tool 253

A new instrument measures patient-reported experiences and outcomes of safety in primary care.

Measuring Waist Circumference 262

The false-negative rate for self-measured waist circumference is over 20% for at-risk patients.

Racism in Medicine 267

A physician rediscovers her power after a patient's racist rant.

Sticker Shock 270

When his daughter needs urgent care, a physician finds that price shopping is not realistic.

Dad's Last Week 273

A family physician helps her father choose his end-of-life path.