

In this issue of the Annals of Family Medicine

Medical Ecology, Utilization, and Expenditures: 1996-1997 and 2011-2012 313

The number of people accessing medical care and their utilization of services have remained stable over time while expenditures have increased.

Mobility of US Rural Primary Care Physicians 322

There is a strong link between rural primary care physicians leaving practice, lower health care resources, and smaller population.

Cervical Cancer Screening Guideline Change and Chlamydia Testing 329

Cervical cancer screening guideline changes are associated with reduced testing for chlamydia.

Delivery of Brief Primary Care Interventions for Heavy Drinking 335

At 9 months, primary care training and support in alcohol screening and brief advice has a small but sustained impact on the proportion of patients receiving the intervention.

Primary Care Physicians' Views on Deprescribing 341

Deprescribing goes against patient expectations, medical culture, and organizational factors, according to physician interviews.

Clinical Decision Rules to Diagnose Acute Rhinosinusitis 347

A predictive model can accurately rule in and rule out acute bacterial maxillary sinusitis.

Mortality and Time in and Out of Buprenorphine Treatment 355

Buprenorphine reduces mortality for those with opioid use disorder, but periods off treatment are associated with much higher mortality rates.

Barriers Rural Physicians Face Prescribing Buprenorphine 359

Rural physicians who do not prescribe buprenorphine report significantly more barriers than those who do.

Challenges for Insured Patients in Accessing Behavioral Health Care 363

Insured patients have limited access to behavioral health care.

The Chief Primary Care Medical Officer 366

A Chief Primary Care Medical Officer could help hospitals ensure continuity of care and physician collaboration across specialties.

Denial 372

A family physician learns that professional and community denial of the opioid crisis are as dangerous as the epidemic itself.

Disenfranchised Grief and Physician Burnout 375

Changing expectations of physicians' duties, roles, and identity contribute to feelings of loss and grief.

Cultivating Inner Life Through Written Reflection 379

Written reflections allow residents to explore their joys and struggles and find meaning in patient care.