

goal to “protect the health of Americans where they live, learn, work and play,” the AAFP noted HHS’ failure to acknowledge the importance of advancing health equity to improve the health of all citizens.

The AAFP then said that as an organization it has “made addressing social determinants of health—as they impact individuals, families and communities across the lifespan and striving for health equity—a strategic priority.” The letter provided a link to the AAFP’s Center for Diversity and Health Equity, <http://www.aafp.org/patient-care/social-determinants-of-health/cdhe.html>, where HHS can also get further details about a new Academy initiative to advance health equity in all communities dubbed “The Every-ONE Project.”

HHS will take recommendations received from the AAFP and others to build on progress made in strategic and performance planning efforts for the future.

About Dr. Newton

Dr. Newton is currently Executive Director of the North Carolina Area Health Education Center (NC AHEC), a national leader in practice redesign, continuing professional development, health careers programming, and innovation in graduate medical education, and Vice Dean of the School of Medicine at the University of North Carolina (UNC). From 1999-2016, he served as the William B. Aycock Professor and Chair of Family Medicine at UNC.

Dr. Newton has been a personal physician for 33 years, working in a variety of settings, including the UNC Family Medicine Center, the Moncure Community Health Center, and the Randolph County Health Department. In the 1990s, he founded the first hospitalist program at UNC Hospitals and helped reorganize family medicine obstetrics into a maternal child service. Over the past 15 years, he has led practice transformation initiatives at the practice, regional, and statewide levels; North Carolina AHEC now provides support in health information technology, PCMH, and quality improvement for over 1,200 primary care practices.

As an educator, Dr. Newton served as residency director at UNC from 1992-1997; since 2004, he has co-lead the 13 collaborative of 24 primary care residencies focused on clinical transformation in the residency practices. He has also taught extensively in medical school and fellowship programs and served as Vice Dean of Medical Education at the University of North Carolina from 2008-2013, during which he led an LCME review, expanded the school, established satellite campuses, developed new curricula in professionalism and population health and expanded the enrollment of underrepresented minorities. Dr. Newton’s scholarship has focused on the organization and effectiveness of health care; he has over 140 peer-reviewed publications, including over 80 published with students, and has been principal investigator on grants totaling more than $45,000,000. Finally, from 2012 to 2017, he served on the Board of Trustees of the North Carolina State Health Plan, responsible for the health and health care of approximately 700,000 state and county employees and retirees. In 2016, he served as Senior Policy Advisor to the North Carolina Secretary of Health and Human Services, helping to prepare the Medicaid 1115 innovation waiver, plan rural residency expansion, and develop quality metrics for Medicaid.

“Warren Newton’s extraordinary service to the discipline of family medicine and his commitment to improving health has been a core value that has guided every aspect of his professional work over the last 3 decades,” said Elizabeth G. Baxley, MD, Professor of Family Medicine at Brody School of Medicine and Chair of the ABFM Board. “I have had the privilege of working with Warren at the state and national level and can attest to his dedication to continuous improvement and innovation in clinical care and education, as well as his drive to strengthen the discipline of family medicine to serve the American public. He is truly a transformative leader, and the ABFM Board of Directors is confident in his abilities to ensure that our certification programs are relevant and worthwhile to both clinicians and patients."

Continuously board certified in family medicine since 1987, Dr. Newton served on the ABFM Board of Directors from 2007-2013, including his term as Board Chair in 2011-12. He currently serves as a Director on the ABFM Foundation Board of Directors. Dr. Newton also brings experience working with the American Board of Medical Specialties, where he serves as a member of the ABMS Committee on Continuing Certification, including a term as one of its first chairs in 2014.

Additional national roles in which Dr. Newton has served include President of the Association of Departments of Family Medicine and Founding Chair of the Council of Academic Family Medicine. He is currently a member of the Liaison Committee of Medical Education and represents the ABFM at the National Academy of Medicine's Global Forum on Innovation in Health Professional Education.

Dr. Newton graduated from Yale University in 1980 and Northwestern Medical School in 1984. After residency and chief residency at the University of North Carolina, he completed the Robert Wood Johnson Clinical Scholars Program and an MPH at the UNC Gillings School of Global Public Health. In 2012-13, he was selected as a Society of Teachers of Family Medicine (STFM) Bishop Fellow, during which he also completed the American Council of Education Fellow's program.

"For nearly 50 years, the American Board of Family Medicine has served family physicians and the public with great distinction. I am delighted to serve the Board and family physicians across the country and honored to follow the outstanding leadership of Jim Puffer," said Newton. "I have great admiration for the family physicians at the forefront of the care and the innovation that the American public needs. The Board is deeply committed to supporting them as they serve their patients and communities, and will continue to help develop the systems and tools needed to support them as they work continually to improve their practices. We are also committed to engagement with our partners—patients and families, other specialties, other professions, other organizations and payers—who share our vision of the need for dramatic improvement in health and health care for the American people."

REFLECTING ON OUR 50TH YEAR

2017 was a year of celebration for STFM. We acknowledged the contributions of past leaders, recognized the important role we fill today in family medicine education, and launched new initiatives to prepare our members to educate future physicians to meet the needs of individuals, families, and communities.

Some of the Year's Accomplishments

Partied like it was 1967! During our 50th Anniversary yearlong celebration, staff and members produced a 50th Anniversary edition of Family Medicine and created a series of videos and blog posts about "remembering the past, embracing the present, and shaping the future." We celebrated at our conferences with special programming, history exhibits, "champagne" toasts, ice sculptures, and possibly the most energetic STFM dance party ever. We ceremoniously packed away anniversary-year mementos in a time capsule to be opened in 2042.

Introduced Peer-Reviewed Reports in Medical Education Research (PRiMER). This open-access scholarly journal publishes original research briefs that fill a gap between the presentation of research results at conferences and the development of full-length articles suitable for submission to traditional print journals, such as Family Medicine. PRiMER editors offer feedback and mentoring to junior researchers.

Launched the Residency Faculty Fundamentals Certificate Program. This assessment-based online program includes self-led courses with assignments to
