

In this issue of the Annals of Family Medicine

Repeated Influenza Immunization and Respiratory Illness in Children With Preexisting Medical Conditions 7

Repeated influenza immunization in children with preexisting medical conditions has no negative effect on, and may enhance, long-term protection against respiratory infection.

Respiratory Tract Infections in Children in the Community 14

Respiratory infection symptoms in children last a median of 9 days, with 90% of symptoms resolving by 3 weeks.

Validation of the Computerized Adaptive Test for Mental Health in Primary Care 23

Computer-adaptive testing to screen for major depressive disorder and assess anxiety severity compares favorably with brief questionnaires in primary care.

Primary Care Research Priorities in Low- and Middle-Income Countries 31

A set of high-priority questions can inform research and primary care delivery in low- and middle-income countries.

Burnout and Health Care Workforce Turnover 36

Burnout contributes to turnover among primary care clinicians, but not among staff.

Clinic Capacity to Address Patients' Social Needs and Physician Satisfaction 42

A clinic's ability to address patients' social needs is linked to physician satisfaction.

Changes in Preparation and Practice Patterns Among New Family Physicians 46

Recent family medicine graduates feel better prepared, but report a narrower scope of practice, than those who graduated a decade earlier.

Development of Research about Primary Care in North America, Europe, and Australia 49

Worldwide primary care research output has risen sharply but still represents a small proportion of publications.

Managing Antidepressant Discontinuation 52

Relapse or recurrence after discontinuing antidepressant medication may be lessened with slow tapering and psychological therapies.

Point-of-Care Ultrasound in General Practice 61

Point-of-care ultrasound exams are performed by family physicians and general practitioners for a variety of diagnostic and screening purposes.

The Role of Research in Family Medicine 70

Early attitudes toward research in family medicine reflected the specialty's countercultural roots.

Integrating Social-Medical Care 77

A focus on social determinants in health care delivery decisions could worsen health and widen inequities.

When "Patient-Centered" is Not Enough 82

A community organizer turned family physician calls for a focus on community, rather than patient, as the agent of change.