

Editor's Disclosure of Financial Conflict of Interest

General Instructions

- This form will be completed annually and posted on the Annals of Family Medicine website. It is required for editorial decision-makers (Editor, Associate Editors, Statistical Editor, Reflections Editor, Innovation Editor, and Fellows) and members of their immediate family.
- Please disclose relevant financial information if it exceeds $1,000. You are not required to disclose amounts less than $1,000.
- You are not required to disclose information that is more than five years old.
- This form pertains to potential financial conflict of interest only. Editors should disclose non-financial competing interests (e.g., personal/professional relationships or personal values that could potentially interfere with their editorial judgment and function) as they arise on an individual manuscript basis.
- Please complete, sign, and date this form and return to AnnFamMed@annfammed.org.

Background

"Editors should avoid making decisions on manuscripts that conflict with their own interest, such as those submitted from their department or by research collaborators, co-authors (in the case of collaborators or co-authors for the past five years, competitors, or those addressing an issue in which they stand to gain financially, e.g., stock in a company whose product is discussed in the article). If they may have a perceived or actual conflict of interest, editors should delegate handling of any decision to other editors with decision-making responsibility."

—Council of Science Editors Whitepaper on Promoting Integrity in Scientific Journal Publications, 2024

Disclosure

On the next page, please list all financial relationships (amounts of $1,000 or more) that could potentially influence, or present the perception of influence, in your decision-making about Annals articles. Please report on financial relationships for you and members of your immediate family for the past five years. These may include but are not limited to:

- salary
- consulting fees
- research grants from an organization with an interest in the research results
- honoraria
- stock or equity interests (other than mutual funds)
- expert testimony
- intellectual property rights, e.g., patents, royalties, and copyrights. If you have no such relationships to disclose, please so state.

Editor's Disclosure of Financial Conflict of Interest

DISCLOSURES:

I am employed by the University of Washington.
I have provided independent consultations to the University of Virginia and the University of Arizona.
I am on the advisory board to two federally funded grants.
I am not aware that any of these would present potential conflicts of interests in the role of Editorial Advisory Board member.
